'No criminal element in City Hall case'

KUALA LUMPUR: The Malaysian Anti-Corruption Commission (MACC) has found no criminal elements in the alleged misconduct surrounding a RM4 million Kuala Lumpur City Hall (DBKL) project linked to actor and director Datuk Afdlin Shauki.

According to Bernama, MACC Chief Commissioner Tan Sri Azam Baki said the conclusion was reached after reviewing documents provided by DBKL on Feb 7 regarding the implementation of its content production and radio studio project.

However, its review identified weaknesses in DBKL's governance guidelines.

"They will need to be addressed," he said yesterday.

He said MACC's Governance Investigation Division was now evaluating DBKL's procurement and payment procedures.
